

Los Angeles, California,
September 21, 1957

Comitato, Cinquantenario
della Arnoldo Mondadori Editore
Via Bianca di Savoia 20,
Milano.

Gentlemen:

Your cinquantennial celebration allows me an opportunity to express my great happiness in belonging to the Mondadori editorial family. No other translation of my books can compare in format, typography, and illustration with the magnificent dress in which the House of Mondadori has presented me to my readers in the land that, after their own, all educated persons love best. With this firm, publishing is an art more than an industry; the greatest art tradition in the world guides its every step; and it holds the beauty of the product to be more important than material profit or passing popularity. I bow my head in appreciation and gratitude.

Sincerely,

Will Durant

